EXPLANATORY NOTES

This Volume contains detailed classifications by age at which full time education ceased and by type of school college etc attended in respect of the population aged 14 years and over derived from the 1966 Census of Population. The Census was taken on the night of 17 April 1966 in accordance with the Statistics (Census of Population) Order, 1966 (S I No 40 of 1966) made by the Taoiseach in pursuance of powers conferred on him by sub-section (1) of Section 16 of the Statistics Act 1926 and the Statistics Acts 1926 and 1946 (Transfer of Ministerial Functions) Order 1949 (S I No 142 of 1949).

The following particulars were collected in respect of each individual (i) Name (ii) relationship to head of household (iii) sex, (iv) date of birth and (v) marital condition and for persons aged 14 years or over (vi) principal occupation, (vii) employment status (i.e. whether employer employee etc.) (viii) name of employer and employer's business (ix) area and rateable valuation of agricultural land held (x) age at which full time education ended and types of school, college etc attended (for persons who had ceased their full time education). In addition the head of each private household was asked to state the number of rooms in the dwelling occupied by the household.

The full publication programme of the 1966 Census comprising the following reports is completed with the present Volume –

- Volume I – Population of District Electoral Divisions towns and larger units of area
- Volume II – Ages and Conjugal Conditions
- Volume III – Industries
- Volume IV – Occupations
- Volume V – Occupations and industries classified by ages and conjugal condition
- Volume VI – Housing and households
- Volume VII – Education

COVERAGE OF THE CENSUS

The Census figures relate to the de facto population i.e. the population recorded for each area represents the total of all persons present within its boundaries on the night of 17 April 1966 together with all persons who arrived in that area on the morning of Monday 18 April 1966 not having been enumerated elsewhere. Persons on board ships in port are included with the population of adjacent areas. The figures therefore include visitors present on Census night in addition to residents but Irish persons temporarily absent from the State on Census night are excluded. The date of the Census was however chosen to coincide with a period of low passenger movement and consequently the figures closely approximate to those for the normally resident population.

Members of the Defence Forces who on Census date were serving with the United Nations Forces abroad were, of course excluded from the enumeration. The total number of officers and men concerned was 537.

CLASSIFICATIONS

EDUCATION

The section of the Census form in which the particulars of education were inserted read as follows -
For persons aged 14 years or over Full time education received

State age at which full time education ended	Insert X in respect of each type of school college, university, etc which was attended full-time
	Primary	Secondary	Vocational, Technical or Commercial	University or Higher Technical

Further directions for making the necessary entries were given on the back of the census form and were as follows -

This section should be completed for each person aged 14 years or over who is no longer receiving full-time education. No entry should be made in respect of part time education. Enter the age at which the person ceased full-time education and insert an X for each type of school college, etc attended, whether or not the full course was completed or a certificate obtained.

The four headings shown include the following types of school or college

PRIMARY

National school Convent national school Monastery national school Model national school Special Irish national school National school for handicapped children Private school Junior or preparatory school attached to a Secondary school Industrial school

SECONDARY

Secondary school Secondary top of primary school

VOCATIONAL TECHNICAL OR COMMERCIAL

Whole time day continuation course Whole time technical course School of Commerce Secretarial college School of domestic science Agricultural school

UNIVERSITY OR HIGHER TECHNICAL

Constituent colleges of the National University of Ireland Dublin University Maynooth College College of Surgeons National College of Art College of advanced technology Teachers training college Military training college Major religious seminary

If a person was educated in another country the X should be inserted according to the nearest equivalent type of educational institution attended in that country

The form of inquiry was relatively simple and was confined exclusively to full time education. It made no attempt to ascertain whether or not persons had completed the courses in the various types of educational establishments attended and nothing was asked as regards certificates degrees diplomas or other qualifications obtained. Such questions would have added greatly to the complexity of the inquiry which was regarded largely as of an experimental nature being the first of its kind at an Irish Census. The result was in general successful although despite the relatively simple questions nearly 5 percent (about 90 000) of replies for individuals were blank incomplete or obviously inconsistent with other information furnished. The latter cases have been treated as if no entries had been made and are included under the "Not stated" headings in the various tabulations. Percentages quoted in the text as well as those given in the Tables are based on totals excluding "Not stated".

While persons were asked to make an entry in respect of each type of educational establishment attended they were classified only by the highest level. Thus, a person who attended primary and secondary school and a university was classified under 'University'. An exception to this was made in those cases where an entry was made under both "Secondary" and "Vocational" but not under "University". In such cases a combined heading "Secondary and Vocational" was used.

OCCUPATION AND INDUSTRY

All persons aged 14 years or over are classified by occupation whether gainful or non gainful. Gainfully occupied persons are also classified by industry. The basis of these classifications is described in detail in Volume III of the Census (Industries) and Volume IV (Occupations). Various cross-classifications by occupation, industry and particulars of education are contained in the present volume (Tables 10-21) for persons whose full time education had ceased. Persons aged 14 years and over who were still receiving full time education are not in general covered by the Tables. The relevant numbers classified by present age are included in Tables 1 and 2 to provide overall totals for the population aged 14 years and over. Further information about the type of school attended or the branch of higher education being pursued is given in Volume IV.

COMMENTARY

The detailed tables which are included at the end of the Commentary are identified by arabic numerals while the tables in the commentary are identified by roman numerals

In 1966 there were 2 038 883 persons aged 14 years or over in the State and of these 142 993 or 7 percent were attending schools colleges etc full time. The remaining 1 895 890 persons had ceased their full time education. These figures are shown in greater detail in TABLE I.

The numbers of males and females in each five year age group (and by single years of age up to 24 years) distinguishing those who at census date were attending school or college and those who had ceased full time education are shown in Tables 1A and 1B. Persons who had ceased full time education are further classified by the age at which their full time education had ceased. In Tables 3A and 3B similar particulars are given the persons who had ceased full time education being further classified by type of school college etc attended.

Almost all those not yet finished their full time education were under 25 years of age. Some 28 percent of all persons aged 14-24 years were receiving full time education. The corresponding percentage at each year of age 14 to 24 years is shown in TABLE II.

Less than one half of the sixteen year olds were receiving full time education and the proportion had dropped to less than one fifth for eighteen year olds. Below the age of 18 years the percentage of females receiving full time education was somewhat higher than of males while above this age the percentage of males exceeded that of females. With increasing age the excess in the percentage of males receiving full time education became more marked the proportions at 24 years of age being 4.8 percent of males and 1.2 percent of females.

In Tables 2A and 2B the percentage distribution of males and females in each age group according to age at which full time education ceased, derived from the figures in Tables 1A and 1B, are shown. These results are summarised in Table III.

75 and over	67.1	19.6	9.5	3.8	100.0	15.3

These figures reveal a steady improvement in the general level of education of the population. Thus, of males aged 25 to 29 years, only 47 percent had left school aged under 15 years, while of those aged 75 years or over 77 percent had left school under 15 years of age. The proportion ceasing full time education after 19 years of age was 9.5 in the case of males in the 25-29 year group, compared with 3.7 percent in the group 75 years and over. As some of the 20-24 year group were, at census date, still receiving full time education, the percentages shown for this group in TABLE III tend to understate the further improvement in the case of the group and in particular to give a lower percentage for the numbers ceasing full time education after 19 years than would be expected from a later census of population by which time most persons born in 1941-46 would have ceased full time education. The average age at which full-time education ceased rose from 15.0 years in the group of males aged 75 years and over to 16.3 years in the age group 25-29 years.

Although the percentages of females in the age range 25 to 64 years who had ceased full time education at ages 19 years or over were slightly lower than those for males, the general picture is that females received full-time education for a longer period than did males. Thus, in the 25 to 29 year age group, only 37 percent of the females ceased their full time education before the age of 15 years, compared with 47 percent in the case of males.

Tables 4A and 4B show the percentage distribution of males and females in each age group according to type of educational establishment attended these figures being derived from Tables 3A and 3B. The results are summarised in TABLE IV.

75 and over	83.9	12.1	1.1	0.8	2.1	100

The pattern revealed by this table is similar to that shown by TABLE III namely a steady improvement in the level of education with decreasing age. Thus, 48 percent of males aged 25-29 years were educated beyond primary school level compared with only 11 percent for the group aged 75 years and over. As in the case of TABLE III the percentages shown for the 20-24 year age group understate the continuing improvement. A much higher proportion of females than males attended secondary school or both secondary and vocational school while the proportions of males and females who attended vocational school only did not differ greatly. A higher proportion of males than females received university type education namely 8 percent as against 6 percent in the 25-29 year age group.

Tables 5A and 5B contain detailed cross-classifications, for males and females respectively of age at census date by age at which full time education ceased and by type of educational establishment attended. The earlier tables of this volume are, in fact, summaries of Tables 5A and 5B. The total figures derived from Tables 5A and 5B combined, showing all persons who had ceased their full time education classified by the age at which this education ceased and type of school, college etc are given in TABLE V

It will be noted that in a substantial number of cases no information on education was provided on the census returns. Particulars of both age at which full time education ceased and type of educational establishment attended were omitted in respect of 46,533 persons. In 29,202 cases age was stated but type of establishment was omitted while in 13,982 cases the type of establishment was stated but age at which full time education ceased was omitted. Thus, for 89,717 persons or almost 5 percent of the total who had ceased full time education one or both items of information regarding education was lacking. As was mentioned in the explanatory notes this figure includes also cases in which the particulars provided were obviously inconsistent with other information on the census form.

The average age at which full time education ceased in the case of persons who attended primary school only was 14.7 years although it will be noted that a small proportion of persons remained at primary school up to 19 years of age. It was not possible to determine from the information available to what extent such entries related to attendance at secondary tops of primary schools incorrectly entered on the household schedule or to incorrect information. The average age at which persons left secondary school was 17.3 years although a small proportion attended secondary school up to 21 years of age.

Tables 6A and 6B show, for males and females respectively, the numbers in each County and County Borough classified by age at which full time education ceased while Tables 7A and 7B give the corresponding percentage distribution. These results are summarised, for broad regional groupings, in TABLE VI

Thirty percent of the females who had ceased full time education were gainfully occupied and of these about one-fifth were married or widowed. The level of education of the gainfully occupied females was considerably higher than that of the non gainfully occupied, 53 percent of the former group and 31 percent of the latter having received post-primary full time education. As in the case of males, this result depends to a considerable extent on the differing age structure in the two groups, the non-gainfully occupied group containing a higher proportion of females in the upper, and less educated, age groups. Substantial differences also existed between the education received by the married or widowed and the single gainfully occupied females. Forty percent of the former group and 56 percent of the latter had received post primary full time education. However, the proportion which had received university type education was considerably higher in the case of married or widowed females who were gainfully occupied than in the case of those who were single. Almost sixty percent of the women who had received university type education were gainfully occupied and of these almost thirty percent were married or widowed.

Table 11A shows males gainfully occupied and not gainfully occupied classified by age at census date (for ages up to 24 years) and age at which full-time education ceased. Table 11B contains corresponding particulars for females, further sub divided into married or widowed and single. The percentages of males not gainfully occupied at each age, derived from Table 11A are shown in TABLE IX.

This Table gives an indication of the rate at which males obtained employment after they left school college, etc. although it should be borne in mind that it is a cross sectional analysis and that the figures in each row of a particular column relate to different groups of people and do not strictly speaking represent the experience over a number of years of the same group of people. It appears that males who left school aged 14 years did not obtain employment as quickly as those who left at higher ages nor was the percentage who ultimately obtained employment as high.

Tables 13A and 13B show males and females respectively in each occupational group classified by age at which full time education ceased and by highest type of educational establishment attended full time while Tables 16A and 16B contain similar particulars for individual occupational headings. The percentage distribution by age at which full-time education ceased, of males and females in each occupational group are shown in Tables 14A and 14B and corresponding distributions by type of educational establishment attended full time are shown in Tables

15A and 15B The percentage of males and females in some of the principal occupational groups who attended the various types of educational establishments are shown in TABLE X

Similar classifications in respect of industrial groups and individual industry headings (for persons at work only) are contained in Tables 17 to 21. It should be noted, both as regards the occupational and the industrial classifications in relation to education that the figures refer to persons of all ages within each particular occupational or industrial group. It is likely that in most occupations and industries, as in the population at large, persons in the younger age groups had a higher level of education than had those in the older age groups. Consequently the educational level of the persons within an occupation or industry as revealed by the census does not necessarily represent the level of education required by new entrants to that occupation or industry. It should also be repeated in relation to these tables, that individuals in particular occupations or industries may have had considerably higher qualifications obtained by part-time study than could be inferred from their full-time education only, while on the other hand attendance at secondary school or University does not automatically imply completion of a full course.
